TRAIL & LOOKOUT GUIDE

To access all trails, follow the walkway from the Visitor Center and cross Hawk Mountain Road to begin at the entrance. TRAILS ARE ROCKY AND UNGRADED except the walk to South Lookout.

SOUTH LOOKOUT:

175 yards from Entrance Gate, the trail to this lookout is groomed and can be accessed by motorized wheelchairs as well as by manual wheelchairs with assistance. Below South Lookout is the River of Rocks, an Ice-Age boulder field. An observer-interpreter is stationed daily at South Lookout September through early November.

LOOKOUT TRAIL (orange blazes)

Vertical rise: 300 feet. The easiest trail to North Lookout (NLO) is the Lookout Trail. Alternatives are the Express Route, a steep shortcut often used for return descent, and the rocky difficult Escarpment Trail that follows the ridge edge. The North Lookout consists of large boulders that require rock scrambling to traverse.

The official hawk counter is stationed at NLO in spring and autumn. On a clear day, the 200° panoramic view extends 70 miles. The series of folded mountains and valleys to the northwest is the Ridge-and-Valley Province of the central Appalachians. The Kittatinny is its most southeasterly ridge.

SILHOUETTE TRAIL (ACCESSIBLE) (green blazes)
This trail is wheelchair accessible and offers an alternative route to South Lookout. It is 900 feet long, and the grade does not exceed 8.3 %.

RIVER OF ROCKS TRAIL (red blazes)

Vertical descent: 600 feet. Begin this trail by turning right just before South Lookout. Allow 3-4 hours to complete loop. The loop trail is rough and rocky. Several unmarked trails cross this trail; pay extra attention and follow the RED blazes.

SKYLINE TRAIL (blue blazes)

This rugged, ridgtop trail follows the spine of the Kittatinny eastward and down over North Lookout, crosses East Rocks (a scenic overlook), and joins the Appalachian Trail 2.5 miles from NLO. This difficult trail includes 4-point rock scrambling and is recommended only for experienced hikers—just off NLO is a 30-foot vertical descent. The trail is accessible via part of the Lookout Trail, Golden Eagle Trail, and River of Rocks Trail.

GOLDEN EAGLE TRAILS (yellow blazes)

Vertical rise: 800 feet. This trail connects the Skyline Trail (blue) with the River of Rocks Trail (red) and follows a steep grade. The trail loop is 4 miles.
